

Follow Your Dreams

I never thought this day would come, I have dreamed of becoming a part of the Scottish women's national team ever since I was little. But now the day has come right around the corner and in half an hour I will get to step on Hampdens Scottish football pitch. I felt so happy, there were so many fans cheering my name! It was only 15 minutes before the game started so I jogged through the tunnel into the changing room and me and my team's coach Pedro Martinez Losa told me and my team our team tactics we were playing against Georgia. Me and my team walked out of the bright tunnel and I heard the crowd go wild. They were all doing the Mexican wave too! I blew a kiss to all of the Scottish crowd then my team and I all lined up and both teams shook hands. As soon as the whistle blew me and my team pushed right from the start, it was a very tough game but we continued to play our best. In the 60th minute one of their players did a very rough tackle and injured my ankle but I kept on playing on the free kick just outside the box so I took my chances and shot and I scored! I achieved player of the match and was so happy with the results 1-0 Scotland! So, if you have a dream then follow it you never know what will happen.
